“Don’t Believe In God? You Are Not Alone”

As we pointed out last week, if we drew a map of the Milky Way galaxy (the galaxy of which we are a part), and represented the Earth and Sun as two dots one inch apart (thus a scale of one inch equals 93 million miles — the distance between the Earth and the Sun), we would need a map at least four miles wide to locate the next nearest star, and a map 25,000 miles wide to reach the center of our galaxy. Very impressive, wouldn't you say?

In view of these FACTS set forth by Scientists, I would say that the "faith" of believers in God is not preposterous.

What About the Atheists and the Humanists?

Well, the majority of those I have ever known who are Atheists cite the Big Bang Theory and the Theory of Evolution as the objects of their faith. In view of the above evidence of the universe and the preciseness and order of all the galaxies it is easy to see why people have faith in God.

I would like, by comparison, to look at the Big Bang Theory. It would certainly take a greater faith to accept the theory that there was a great explosion in outer space that produced the universe in its preciseness. That would be like saying that there was an explosion in a big print shop in downtown Tampa. As a result of the explosion there was produced (by all of the type that was scattered) the Tampa Telephone Book with every name spelled correctly and in alphabetical order. Which do you think is more reasonable – a Tampa telephone directory designed by man with all the names in alphabetical order or the same book that just happened as the result of an explosion in a print shop? The same principle would apply to the universe. God designed it! Think, good people – THINK! More Next Week
